Native plant production for public development projects

Situated in Point Clare, the Green Pathways Nursery can support planned native plant supply for public realm, development landscaping and environmental projects.

Engage early to discuss species, quantities, specifications, programme dates and staged delivery requirements.

Purpose-built Facilities

Two new greenhouses, dedicated potting areas and practical workstations support propagation, growing and order preparation.

Skilled Supervision

Nursery activity is led by an experienced nursery manager, with structured workflows and production oversight.

Specification-led Planning

Discuss plant schedules, nominated species, target quantities, specifications, delivery stages and forward growing arrangements.

Local Social Value

Purchasing will contribute to practical horticulture training and employment pathways for people living with disabilities.

The thing is, Green Pathways is more than just a nursery...

A local supply partner with Social Impact

On top of providing:

- ✓ Local Central Coast production
- ✓ Quality, price and reliability first, and
- ✓ Staged supply planning

Green Pathways Nursery also combines nursery production with practical horticulture training for people with living with disabilities. Through the nursery, they gain valuable, hands-on work experience, creating future pathways to employment in plant care.

That means a Green Pathways order doesn't just support local landscapes - it supports locals living with disability, too.

Not just measurable social impact, but visible each time you visit the nursery.

So, the next time your local area needs:

Native tubestock and project supply

Planned supply for streetscapes, parks, public realm, development landscaping, revegetation and biodiversity projects, subject to agreed species and availability.

Contract growing

Forward growing for defined species, quantities, specifications and delivery windows, subject to an agreed scope and production plan.

Staged project orders

Staged supply aligned with construction, landscape and planting programmes, helping project teams co-ordinate procurement and site readiness.

Custom discussions

Early review of plant schedules, substitutions, lead times, packaging, delivery staging and practical production requirements.
